

Deliverable 3 IN5430 spring 2018

In this deliverable you will reflect further on the findings from your project group's work across the themes of IT Governance and Enterprise Architecture. In other words, use your group project as the basis for answering the questions in the assignment. Use the course literature actively where you see it is relevant (you may also use other relevant literature in addition). Length: Maximum 2000 words, to be delivered in Devilry on April 30th before midnight.

Introduction: Present shortly your case and the main findings from Deliverable 1 and 2.

IT Governance: Reflect on the interrelation between the five decision domains of the IT governance matrix (see fig. 2.1 in Weill and Ross, 2004): a) discuss and give examples of how decision domains can influence another, b) discuss and give examples of how these interrelations potentially can cause tensions and contradictions. You can use examples from your own project, course literature, or make them up.

Enterprise Architecture: Describe briefly your case organization's operating model and enterprise architecture. Do you see signs that this is being transformed due to what is often called "digitalization"? I.e. that the organization seeks to pursue business models that utilize networks, platforms or cloud-based services, social media-/lightweight coordination, data-intensive services, analytics or learning-based services etc. If yes, then describe what such a transformation seem to imply for the enterprise architecture. If no (or if your data does not support an answer to the question), try to speculate around how your case organization's enterprise architecture may become transformed. Do you think that some of the insights of Ross, Weill and Robertson (2006) are outdated in the light of current technological possibilities?

Conclusion: Reflect on your case study: which insights did it generate? What were the limitations in the study, or what would you liked to have done differently? What was particularly interesting and something you would have liked to pursue further?