Guidelines for article presentation

The main objective of this assignment is to give the students thoroughly understanding of advanced texts about information infrastructures. As a student you will get this by analyzing, discussing and preparing presentations of the articles. This will force you to understand the both the articles you are presenting and the ones you are making questions about, which will make you prepared for writing reports during the semester, but also the final exam.

Each article will be given approximately 20 minutes for presentation and questions. During the seminar, the group will have 10-12 minutes for their presentation while the rest is for questions from another group and discussions in class.

Presenting article
Try to answer the following elements in your presentation:

- Give a brief summary of what the article was about
  - What is the key questions the author(s) are trying to address?
  - What is the answer to the questions stated or what is the key message of the paper that the author(s) try to send the readers?
- Highlight and try to explain the theories
- Try to link theories to real world examples
- What is your opinion of the article?
- What are the strengths and the limitations of the paper that you would like to bring forward?

Formulating questions
To formulate questions to the paper you are required to read the paper carefully and find questions that are suited to stimulate a discussion. You can use the above list as a basis for formulating questions. The questions and discussion session will take 8-10 minutes.
