1 Exam

The exam consists of an essay.

The theme you have chosen must have been agreed by the course conveners (via Canvas) prior to handing in the exam.

Alternatively, you may pick one of these pre-approved questions:

1. Is it useful to view kinship as a cultural phenomenon built upon a natural base? What are the social implications of such a perspective?
2. Does gender have to be built upon the idea of a biological opposition between male and female bodies?
3. Kinship is often understood as belonging to the domestic lives of people. How does looking at blood, marriage, and friendship ties within domain of "the economy" complicate this?
4. Many of the debates around sex work focus on the issue of choice versus force. How may a focus on both kinship and gender nuance these oppositions?

Remember that your essay is meant to demonstrate that you have read and understood the syllabus. While it is fine to use additional sources, it is required that you draw widely on the readings from the syllabus (at a bare minimum use three (3) course resources).

Best of luck!
