

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS

ONLINE | Decolonizing International Affairs Event Series (Spring 2022)

Online | Zoom

Join Sakiko Fukuda-Parr, Professor of International Affairs, in three public events presented as part of the Spring 2022 course Theories, Histories and Practices of Development: Decolonizing International Affairs.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 17, 2022, 6:00PM

ONLINE | Reclaiming and Remaking Development

If 'racism and colonialism still rule the world' and 'colonial logic and neocolonialism' shape global development, as Kehinde Andrews argues in his recent book New Age of Empire, what is the alternative? What are the implications for how international affairs and development paradigms and...

THURSDAY, MARCH 10, 2022, 6:00PM

ONLINE | Afro-Asian Solidarity Politics

When 29 leaders from Africa and Asia met in Bandung in 1955, their purpose was to define a common vision of the postcolonial future, for their countries and the world. They constituted a coalition - The Third World - to pursue an agenda for a decolonized world order, with commitments to human...

THURSDAY, APRIL 07, 2022, 6:00PM

ONLINE | Decolonizing Refugee Governance

Details coming soon!

RSVP at <https://event.newschool.edu/decolonizing-ia-spring22>

Registrants will be sent Zoom links

The Julien J. Studley Graduate Programs in International Affairs at The New School in New York City are designed to prepare engaged, reflective global citizens who can contribute to making the world more inclusive, just, and sustainable. The most pressing contemporary challenges — from the rise of authoritarian regimes and refugee crises to youth unemployment and climate change — demand the deep understanding of complex global systems, new perspectives, real-world experience, and commitment to social justice that our programs provide.